A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 7, Audio/Visual Materials, Alphabetical Listing

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography is a work in progress. It attempts to update Ronald B. De Waal's comprehensive bibliography, The Universal Sherlock Holmes, but does not claim to be exhaustive in content. New works are continually discovered and added to this bibliography. Readers and researchers are invited to suggest additional content.

This volume contains an alphabetical listing of audio-visual materials. Coverage of this material begins around 1994, the final year covered by De Waal's bibliography, but may not yet be totally up-to-date (given the ongoing nature of this bibliography). It is hoped that other titles will be added at a later date.

The first volume in this supplement focuses on monographic and serial titles, arranged alphabetically by author or main entry. The second volume presents the exact same information arranged by subject. The third volume focuses on the periodical literature of Doyle and Holmes, listing individual articles alphabetically. The fourth volume includes "core" or "primary" citations from the periodical literature. The fifth volume includes "passing" or "secondary" references to Doyle or Holmes in the periodical literature. The sixth volume organizes the periodical literature according to De Waal's original categories. As the bibliography expands, additional annotations will be provided in order to give the researcher a better idea on the exact Holmesian or Doylean reference contained in each article.

The compiler wishes to thank Peter E. Blau, Don Hobbs, Leslie S. Klinger, and Fred Levin for their assistance in providing additional entries for this bibliography.

For 40 years, a fossil skull discovered in Piltdown, England, was hailed as the missing link between apes and humans. Then, in 1953, new scientific tests revealed the shocking truth-"Piltdown Man" was a fake! But who could have perpetrated the hoax? Was it the amateur archaeologist, Charles Dawson, who dug up most of the bones? Or the eminent museum curator, Sir Arthur Smith Woodward of Britain's Natural History Museum, who won fame by presenting the reconstructed skull to an eager public in 1912? Could it even have been Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, who lived near Piltdown? With more red herrings and false trails than an Agatha Christie whodunit, The Boldest Hoax digs into intriguing new clues from archives at the Natural History Museum, and delves into the skullduggery and national pride that led a handful of faked bones to hoodwink a generation of leading scientists. Go deep into the archives of Britain's Natural History Museum, where intriguing documents shed new light on this notorious case."--Container.

- Neill. // In Dressed to kill the master detective Holmes and his companion Dr. Watson become enmeshed in a case of murder involving a series of music boxes which harbor some strange significance. The twisting and turning trail leads Holmes to the maker of these precious musical objects, a man behind bars. A group of thugs headed by the seductive Hilda Courtney (Patricia Morison) is willing to kill to acquire them. Holmes must resist the devilish femme-fatale in his race to uncover the clues that will solve the mystery and put the underworld mob out of business. In Terror by night, Holmes and Watson find themselves up against a brutal murderer who has just stolen an extremely rare diamond. Their search puts them on a train with a collection of characters, any one of whom could be the killer. They must deduce who is the killer before they reach the station and he can escape.

Griffith (as Granville Warwick); titles by Anita Loos ; cinematography by John W. Leezer ; D.W. Griffith, supervisor. // The Gaucho and his men take over the City of the Miracle, carousing and planning to steal from the shrine there. A Mexican mountain girl falls for him and fights every woman who looks his way. The Gaucho tries to seduce the Girl of the Shrine, but her innocence and piety, combined with a miracle cure when he is infected with leprosy, reform him. When an evil gang threatens to execute the priest and the Girl of the Shrine, the Gaucho saves them at the last moment with a diversionary cattle stampede and rides off with his mountain girl. The second title is a strange little comedy featuring Coke Ennyday, a cheerfully addicted cocaine-using "scientific detective" (in a parody of Sherlock Holmes), and his pursuit of a gang of opium smugglers.

Ranging from Hardy's tale of chilling coincidences to Dahl's subtle treatment of war trauma, these stories reflect the vitality of England's literary arts. Youth, colonialism, class structure, and wish fulfillment are among the many themes cleverly teased out by such masters as Saki, Kipling, Woolf, and Maugham. Entertaining and instructive, this collection by some of England's finest writers would make a ... supplement to any study of British literature. -Publisher description.

Music, Robert Carli. // In the 1890's, Detective William Murdoch adopts modern techniques like 'finger marks' and forensics to track Toronto's most sinister killers. Though derided by his skeptical boss, Murdoch finds friends and allies in a lovely pathologist and an eager-to-learn constable. Along the way they cross paths with some of the era's most famous figures, including Nikola Tesla, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Prince Alfred.

Hiscott [Triumph of Sherlock Holmes] ; Thomas Bentley [Sherlock Holmes: murder at the Baskervilles] ; Roy William Neill [Sherlock Holmes: the woman in green]. // [Sherlock Holmes: the sign of four]: Holmes and Watson are determined to protect Mary Morstan who is threatened by an escaped murderer. The killer is looking for a stolen fortune and revenge on the man who stole it. [Triumph of Sherlock Holmes]: Holmes, retired to Sussex, is drawn into a last case when his arch enemy Moriarty arranges with an American gang to kill one John Douglas, a country gentleman with a mysterious past. Holmes' methods baffle Watson and Lestrade, but his results astonish them. In a long flashback, the victim's wife tells the story of the sinister Vermissa Valley. [Sherlock Holmes: murder at the Baskervilles]: Sherlock Holmes takes a vacation and visits his old friend Sir Henry Baskerville. His vacation ends when he suddenly finds himself in the middle of a double-murder mystery. Now he's got to find Professor Moriarty and the horse Silver Blaze before the great cup final horse race. [Sherlock Holmes: the woman in green]: Holmes and Watson investigate a series of bizarre and apparently unconnected murders, and the death of a possible suspect. The trail leads to a society of hypnotists and a mysterious, glamorous woman. The fiendish Dr. Moriarty, though reported hanged in Montevideo, is believed to be involved.

Directors: Edwin L. Marin [Sherlock Holmes: a study in scarlet] ; Roy William Neill [Sherlock Holmes and the secret weapon] ; Roy William Neill [Sherlock Holmes: terror by night] ; Roy William Neill [Sherlock Holmes: dressed to kill]. // [Sherlock Holmes: a study in scarlet]: Members of an underground crime ring are being murdered. Holmes' investigation leads him to the beautiful Mrs. Pyke and to a stately ancestral home -- complete with screams in the foggy night, cloaked figures moving through secret passages, and a sinister Asian butler. The story bears little resemblance to the original A. Conan Doyle mystery. [Sherlock Holmes and the secret weapon]: Starting in Switzerland, Sherlock Holmes rescues the inventor of a bomb-sight which the allies want to keep from the Nazis. Back in London it seems that the inventor is not all that he seemed. [Sherlock Holmes: terror by night]: Holmes is hired by Roland Carstairs to prevent the theft of the Star of Rhodesia, an enormous diamond owned by Carstairs' mother, Lady Margaret. Believing the diamond will be stolen on a train trip from London to Edinburgh, Holmes deftly switches diamonds with Lady Margaret while in her compartment. Soon after, Roland is murdered and the fake diamond is stolen. Red herrings abound as Holmes, aided by Dr. Watson and Inspector Lestrade, discover the murderer's hiding place and deduce that long-time foe Moriarty's henchman Colonel Sebastian Moran is somehow involved in the crime. [Sherlock Holmes: dressed to kill]: A convicted thief in Dartmoor prison hides the location of the stolen Bank of England printing plates inside three music boxes. When the innocent purchasers of the boxes start to be murdered, Holmes and Watson investigate.

Keiser, Paul Kincaid ; camera, Rae Swan, Steve Wynn, Richard Schuldt ; editors, Rae Swan ... [et al.]. // Part of a weekly television series discussing issues facing Springfield, Mo. The series is an outgrowth of the Good Community Movement in Springfield which began in 1995. This segment looks at how science is used in solving crime, with a focus on the Sherlock Holmes stories. Today's police investigators rely heavily on science to help them solve crime. Methods range from fingerprinting from an actual finger to "fingerprinting" from DNA. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the English writer, was an early proponent of the scientific method in criminal investigation was. His Sherlock Holmes mysteries were filled with legitimate and innovative scientific sleuthing. Interviews SMSU chemistry professor Jim O'Brien, who has developed an SMSU Capstone course investigating how science is used to solve crime, with several examples from Sherlock Holmes. Also interviews Willa Garrett, assistant professor, SMSU Dept. of Library Science, who has joined with Dr. O'Brien in researching the use of science in solving crime.

Version: Videodisc version is the David Shepard restoration, with music track featuring a contemporary score by the Club Foot Orchestra. Buster Keaton Productions ; presented by Joseph M. Schenck ; director, Buster Keaton ; story, Clyde Bruckman, Jean Havez, Joseph Mitchell. Photographer, Byron Houck, Elgin Lessley; art director, Fred Gabourie; costumes, Clare West. // "Dramatizing the uproarious exploits of a meek theater projectionist-turned-amateur-sleuth, the film blends the knockabout physical comedy normally linked to slapstick with amazing stunts and subtly crafted moments of humor--such as the sequence in which Buster leaps through the silver screen and lands in the midst of the action. Packed within its modest length is enough comic material for several ordinary features, but Keaton and uncredited co-director Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle have compressed it all into a dazzling display of cinematic inventiveness that characterizes the timeless art of Buster Keaton"-- Videodisc sleeve.

Participants: Narrator: Salome Jens. directed by Blaine Baggett ; written by Blaine Baggett & Margaret Koval & Jay Winter ; produced by Margaret Koval. // Broken hopes, broken families, broken lives: the world at the end of the Great War was full of them. This final episode explores the aftermath of the war and the failed peace. For the "lost generation", the war would be without end. Living reminders were everywhere: men with missing limbs, mutilated faces, and shaking bodies. And then there were the dead, most who remained hundreds, sometimes thousands of miles away on the battlefields where they fell. The question "Why did they have to die?" would haunt the generation of survivors. People dealt with grief in different ways. Artists painted what they had seen. Writers tried writing it out of their systems. Millions of the bereaved sought relief from their ghostly memories through spiritualism -- communicating with the dead. Among the main proponents was Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes, who gave up writing to devote himself to the movement. For some German soldiers, a bitter memory was the march home from the war. They had come back as an army, defeated but unbowed. Many of them believed they had been betrayed at home -- "stabbed in the back". This accusation would launch the political career of Adolf Hitler and bring on the second global war of the 20th century.

Each story contains the common elements of the gothic tale--a warped sense of time, a claustrophobic setting, a link to archaic modes of thought, and the impression of a descent into disintegration. Yet taken together, they reveal the progression of the genre from stories of feudal villains amid crumbling ruins to a greater level of sophistication in which writers brought the gothic tale out of its medieval setting, and placed it in the contemporary world. Bringing together the work of such writers as Eudora Welty, Thomas Hardy, Edgar Allan Poe, William Faulkner, Arthur Conan Doyle, Joyce Carol Oates, and Jorge Luis Borges, The Oxford Book of Gothic Tales presents a wide array of the sinister and unsettling for all lovers of ghost stories, fantasy, and horror."

Through this chain of unexpected connections, you can "stay in touch". Hit the water: Start in the cockpit of a Tornado fighter bomber, dip into the history of margarine and plankton, travel to 18th century Turkey to investigate small pox inoculations, dance at the ballet Coppelia, spend time with Voltaire, blow up a dam in Norway with a British commando team and end up, through the intimate world of unexpected connections, discovering exactly why Hitler never managed to harness the power of the atomic bomb. Fire from the sky: Go from the majestic beauty of Iceland's geysers to the Allies firebombing of Hamburg in World War II, stop by Stonehenge, chat with Kaballists, visit with Martin Luther, Ozcander, Tycho Brahe, and Mary, Queen of Scots, then head to the magnetic North Pole. The invention of gin and tonic will set you back on course to the discovery that mixing rubber with gasoline makes it burn slower--an integral component of any firebombing. A special place: Journey 400 years into the past to connect famous sleuths and popular destinations through Dutch wind tunnels and aristocratic World War I fighter aces. Discover how Caribbean smugglers and bird-painters led to Russian skullduggery, and ultimately to a final beauty spot where hundreds of Americans get drenched every day. Elementary stuff: Begin the journey with miracles and spiritualism and end with the greatest detective of them all. Some of the clues connect 20th century thought-transference and radio with banana republics and postage stamps. Learn how Scottish rebels and North Carolina pine trees revolutionized the French navy, and how contextual perception led to Sherlock Holmes. Life is no picnic: Learn the connection between coffee served during World War II and 19th century theories of evolution through the invention of nylon and the Star Spangled Banner. Discover how a new method for calculating astronomical dates and the death of Descartes led to the creation of the Royal Society, and how the jellyfish made Charles Darwin famous. An invisible object: Travel 500 years into the past to connect mysterious black holes in space with modern fast food, via thrills and spills on the Pony Express and the capture of Joan of Arc. Learn how a gift for Catherine de Medici led to modern techniques for pasteurization and, eventually, the first vending machine. Drop the apple: With the discovery of calamine, James Smithson, the benefactor of the Smithsonian Institution, did a lot for sunburns, poison ivy and diaper rash. Calamine is one of the most useful and unusual minerals because it gives off electricity, leading to Einstein's theory of relativity and to the creation of the atomic bomb. What's in a name?: A good breakfast leads to corn cob garbage--which isn't garbage at all. It is used to create resin for bonding. Learn how this led to the creation of the tractor and the diesel engine and, surprisingly, the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C. Feedback: Look at the use of feedback in the 21st century. Learn how the concept originated in the vineyards of France and how the Humane Society, drowning, shipping, a new diet and Kellogg's Corn Flakes are all related.

With an afterword by Anne Perry. // The country doctor had come to 221B Baker Street, the famous lodgings of Sherlock Holmes, with an eerie tale - the legend of the Hound of the Baskervilles, the devil-beast that haunted the lonely moors around the Baskervilles' ancestral home. The tale warned the descendants of that ancient family never to venture out on the moor "in those dark hours when the powers of evil are exalted." But one of the most recent Baskervilles, Sir Charles, was now dead - and the footprints of a giant hound had been found near his body. Would the new heir of the Baskervilles meet the same dreadful fate? Sherlock Holmes and his faithful friend, Dr. Watson, are faced with their most terrifying case in this wonderful classic of masterful detection and bone-chilling suspense.-Back cover.

760. Doyle, Arthur Conan, William Gillette, Yuri Rasovsky, Martin Jarvis, and Kristoffer Tabori. Sherlock Holmes theatre. Ashland, OR: Blackstone Audiobooks, 2005. Sound Recording 5 sound discs (ca. 72 min. each).
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- Digital ; 4 3/4 in. Unabridged. Compact disc. Read by Martin Jarvis (Sherlock Holmes) and Kristoffer Tabori (Dr. Watson) and a full cast. // In the Napoleon of crime, Professor Moriarty plots with would-be blackmailers to have Holmes killed. And the normally love-proof Holmes falls for an exceptional woman. The play was co-authored by the American matinee idol William Gillette, who played the title sleuth. A smash hit from the beginning, the play remained in Gillette's repertoire until he retired more than thirty years after its premiere. What is the secret of the shocking death of poor Enid's sister? What did she mean by her dying words, "the speckled band? What danger does Enid face from the brutal Dr. Rylott? Only Holmes can scope out the answer and save the helpless girl from certain death. Sir Arthur adapted The Speckled band (1910) from his own short story of that name. A stage success on three continents, the play hasn't received a professional revival for eighty-four years. When Holmes turned fifty, he retired and became a beekeeper, creating a crisis for his friend Watson, whose income derived from the Holmes stories he contributes to the Strand magazine. Further, the doctor owes money to mobsters who want either their cash or his blood. The surprising upshot is, as the headlines proclaim, a Ghastly double murder in famed detective's flat, a one-act comedy by producer-director Yuri Rasovsky, here receiving its audiobook premiere.

Read by David Timson. // In The adventure of the empty house: In disguise, Sherlock Holmes returns from his supposed death at the hands of Moriarty, much to the astonishment of his friend, Dr. Watson. After explaining where he's been for three years, Holmes leads Watson to an empty house where they find Moriarty's second in command, Sebastian Moran, firing his air rifle across the street at a moving silhouette of Holmes in the study of 221B. Moran is captured and revealed as the murderer of an innocent man who was about to expose his cheating at cards. In The adventure of the Norwood builder: Holmes and Watson are engaged in clearing a young man from a charge of murder against a builder who has mysteriously disappeared. In The adventure of the six Napoleons: Holmes and Watson are called upon to solve the mystery of why busts of Napoleon are being smashed all over London. In The adventure of the three students: Holmes and Watson are in one of the great university towns to research early English charters when they are engaged by a professor of Greek concerning the rifling (and possible copying) of the proofs for a scholarship exam.

He careened through the country, offering money for spirit contacts he couldn't duplicate by admitted magical chicanery. It was a heyday not only for Houdini but for the spirit-callers and there was an equally famous protagonist who thought the spirits could indeed be contacted, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. A photo at the front records a meeting between Houdini and Doyle and Houdini gives Doyle his own chapter. There's an earlier chapter on Daniel Dunglas Home, the English engineer of spectacular paranormal effects. Houdini raises hell with spiritualists who were giving their (usually paying) clients a vision of heavens to come, and shares the methods used to practice "fake" and sensational spiritualism. Houdini was nothing if not unrelenting. As a taste of things to come, he ends his introduction with the words: "Up to the present time everything that I have investigated has been the result of deluded brains." -Back cover.

Denis Judd & Keith Surridge. // "The Boer War," Fought between British forces and the Dutch descendents in South Africa from 1899 to 1902, was an epic war of heroism, but also one of bungling, cunning, and barbarism. It had an extraordinary cast of characters - not only leading men like Churchill, Kruger, Rhodes, Smuts, Botha, and Kitchener, but also minor characters like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, Gandhi, and Emily Hobhouse. The war revealed the ineptitude of the British military and widespread anti-Semitism. It exposed the corrupt underside of imperialism and brought into being the most dreaded of all war time creations, the concentration camp. [In this book, the authors'] history of the Boer War presents a ... view of the conflict and debunks several myths. There was not, for instance, a straight-forward divide between Boers and British. Many Boers fought on the British side, and many British were pro-Boer, denouncing their own side's "methods of barbarism." In fact, in the history of the two communities, the war was an uncharacteristically violent collision. Although it led to some long-standing resentments, the overriding aim of both sides was to maintain European supremacy and to keep Africans and Indians "in their place." The sensitivity the British displayed to the Afrikaner volk in the peace treaty is evidence of this as was the continued division of power and spoils that lasted until the end of the Apartheid era. This new history of the Boer War is a gripping retelling of this military conflict. Even more importantly, it is the chronicle of a dispute with aftereffects that haunted the world throughout the entire twentieth century.-Dust jacket.
